STUDY DAYS

Staff training for implementing change

The next study days of the ENTER network at AgroSup Dijon will give the opportunity to discuss different approaches and contexts on the issue of the staff training for implementing changes and playing new roles, which need both professional developments, the raising of professional awareness, and the management of staff.

Three key questions

- How to train students-teachers / management staff to be creative?
- How to contribute to change, by experimenting methods, tools, innovation...?
- How can managers monitor change in institutions?

Four issues to be developed and discussed in parallel sessions:

- Trends for staff training related to implementation of change (example of best practices)
- Tools, methods to increase self awareness of schools, teams...
- Needs for Heads and Staff (teachers, advisors, counsellors...) to become "change agents"
- New curricula related to economical, sociological, environmentalchanges.

The study days will present knowledge from theory and research, school practice and personal/local/national understanding of the theme.

A variety of contributions is expected from the participants:

- Academic papers - Accounts of experiences - Posters
